GOVERNMENT BY LAW AND BY MEN

Attention seemingly out of proportion to the importance of the actual incident is being given the wrist-slapping administered by Justice Black, with Justice Murphy concurring, to that symbolic torch bearer for New Dealism, Justice Frankfurter. If it be true—and it is—that political policy reflects the ground previously gone over by the theorists, the incident may tell a good deal about coming events.

In substance, Justice Black has taken Justice Frankfurter to task for mixing up law and his own opinions in reaching judicial decisions. This is, of course, the very essence of the issue between proponents of government strictly by law and of government by interpretation; i. e., men. Justice Frankfurter, both before and after his elevation to the supreme court, has been credited with many of the legal strategies and devices which gave the Roosevelt administration authority which never was granted by any congressional intent.

This has been throughout the nation's history one of the most difficult concepts to establish among the people—that they were subject only to law, that administrators and courts were empowered to administer nothing but law and that they, themselves, had no authority other than that bestowed by law. Most difficult of all to deal with has been the misconception that the supreme court could administer objective justice; the court's function is to work entirely with the law, even if in its opinion the law is wrong. The fact New Deal appointees to the court can fall out over the principle is solid testimony to the fact that something really does happen to men who ascend to the court. Certainly Justice Black was not expected to be among the challengers of the principles of the New Deal system of making the laws justify its ends.

RUSSIAN REBUTT

The Communist newspaper Pravda's tart rejoinder to Wendell Wilkie's plea for good feeling toward Russia in last Sunday's New York Times is a lesson in internationalism not only for Mr. Wilkie, but all of us.

In this country, his remarks were construed as they obviously were written—as a sympathetic viewpoint on the Russian question. But Pravda rejects the sympathy because it was accompanied by remarks indicating that the future of Poland, the Baltic states and similar questions raised by Russia's success in the war and its expanding influence should be the subject of international determination. These matters, says Pravda in the Russian equivalent of words of one syllable, lie wholly in the sphere of Russian determination. Or, in two words of one syllable each, Mr. Wilkie is off base.

That means, of course, that everybody else with the same notion is in the same fix, a version which comes a great deal closer to the ordinary American viewpoint of the matter than Pravda probably realizes. While the current credo of internationalism seems to call for Americans to help settle everything everywhere, even in this country there lingers a strong conviction based on previous experience with the credo that somewhere between spreading ourselves too thin and holding ourselves too aloof is going to be found the proper—or at least the practical—course of foreign policy. Pravda, which usually speaks for the Kremlin, may have used Mr. Wilkie to clear up some points left obscure at Teheran.

TIMES TEST

Theodore Roosevelt, who died 25 years ago, is withstanding time's test. His observations on the problems he dealt with so aggressively in his lifetime are quoted today with telling effect. The vision he held of a strong, free America revitalized eternally by the rising strength of a people encouraged to better their condition under an unshinibled conception of enterprise is getting renewed attention. His views on this nation's proper place and responsibilities in a world society have been confirmed resoundingly by the experiences of war.

A quarter of a century after his death the example of his dynamic leadership in politics and the impact of his vigorous personality on his countrymen still are keeping his memory green.

Men who knew him best—men whose lives were shaped in large part by contact with his greatness—are organized in a Memorial association to perpetuate his influence. While there is a great project, Theodore Roosevelt's influence is being perpetuated more widely than any association could hope for, in the steady development of this nation's influence. He was among the first to see the possibilities, and he was among the first to steer in that direction.

Only a ghastly misunderstanding of destiny or a gross misreading of the mandate of responsibility given America by virtue of its own principles can serve us in 1944 from the course Theodore Roosevelt set during his years of influence.

TAXING PATIENCE

One more move to simplify income taxes and not even the fun-with-figures boys will be able to understand them. But between now and March 15 when the complicated documents now being inflicted on taxpayers must be turned in letter-perfect or else, there are two things to remember.

First, what started out as a move to simplify the income tax procedure ended up as a deliberate move to complicate it as much as possible to discredit the minority in congress which dared to challenge the treasury and the Democratic majority by suggesting simplification in the first place.

Second, income taxation has become hopelessly complex because it has been jerry-built from a means of taxing citizens of great wealth into a colossal and awkward machine for taxing almost everybody who works for a living. It is as archaic in its present form as trying to run an automobile with a team of oxen.

Its effect is to tax patience while taxing income, and it isn't likely to improve until some 30,000,000 harassed citizens with more to do than sweat out obtuse angles to appease the obtuse thinking of muddled legislators and the experts who specialize in keeping them that way demand real simplification.

THE STARS SAY:

For Saturday, January 8

THE AFFAIRS of this day may be definitely changed by important news, with prospects of promising openings, or advice of ways and means to rearrange factors that have been thwarting, beclouding, or disturbing the orderly progress of events. Complex situations may be simplified, possibly by a settling of excitable, restless or nerve wracking experiences. Intelligent, clever, and thoughtful decisions, agreeing with new plans or associates, may open profitable and pleasant avenues for definite progress. Sign agreements with prudence but swiftly.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have an acceptable solution for entangled or dubious affairs by the receipt of news of major importance to the final profitable issues. While change and rearranging of ideas, plans and policies are probable, the decisions may be made swiftly and under pressure, although new affiliations may be reliable, and have integrity and desire for definite progress and personal gratifications. Thought, intelligence, alert and clever consideration should precede signing of papers or accepting agreements. Pleasant associations both business and private are indicated.

A child born on this day should have good ideas, with acumen versatility, and skill, but be over eager, restless or excitable. If this is controlled it has excitable. If this is controlled it has excellent opportunities to achieve its ambitions.

"WHERE TOKYO WAS"

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 7.—When American troops get to where Tokyo now stands, there'll be "a little celebration where Tokyo was," says Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of Allied forces in the South Pacific.

The comment prefaced Halsey's appearance at the Army-Navy war conference which begins today with discussions by Gen. H. H. Arnold, army air forces chief, and other military officials with west coast civic and business leaders.

Holding his first press conference since his secret return to the mainland New Year's eve, Halsey refused to predict yesterday when the Tokyo celebration would take place, declaring he had done so once (New Year's day, 1943, when he said the Japanese would be defeated in 1943). Speaking of his operational area, he added:

"We have the finest representatives of American manhood ever assembled, and they're fighting as one team. The Japs don't like the way they're fighting—and they'll like it even less."

Halsey said American boys had proved to be better jungle fighters than the Japanese ever were and are killing the enemy at a ratio of ten to one.

We have reached the peak of war production, so it does not seem likely that the national income will go any higher. Consequently taxes cannot.—Rep. Harold Knutson of Minnesota.

Almost anybody can get his name in the paper by predicting when he thinks the war will end—and one's guess is as good as another.

GUARDING YOUR HEALTH

Causes of Headache Many and Varied

BY LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
HEADACHE is said to account for at least 20 per cent of absenteeism from routine duties.

The head is a very delicate barometer of health. There are few infectious diseases that are not ushered in by a headache. Nearly any derangement of the bodily economy may be signaled by a headache. If the environment is not conducive to smooth physiologic functioning of the body the head gives the warning. The stuffy, overheated office, or the noisy schoolroom, even the automobile journey in fresh air which flashes objects past the eyes demanding a dozen re-focusing of a minute—all result in the red signal of headache.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The headache mentioned in the above paragraph are acute, due to temporarily acting causes. They are not particularly puzzling and they yield to simple analgesics—such as aspirin, phenacetin or acetanilid. The headaches that require skill and attention to treat are the chronic, regular or recurrent headaches. These may be classified as follows:

Regional Headaches

Due to trouble localized near where the pain is in the head.

1. Brain and meninges—these are very rare.
2. Ocular imbalance.
3. Ear and mastoid disease.
4. Deformities and infections of the nose, sinus disease. Neuralgias of the nerves of the face and scalp.

Headaches of Systemic Origin

1. Chronic infections—gallbladder or pelvic organs in women.
2. Generalized changes—high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, kidney trouble, Bright's disease, chronic intestinal absorption (a favorite explanation of cranks and quacks, in reality very rare), focal infection—teeth, etc.

3 Endocrine and allergic causes. The first especially in women.

Idiopathic Headache

These are migraine and nerve headaches.

Some of these are easy to spot, some require all the resources of the most completely equipped clinic.

The recurrent headache of the devoted mother which came on at 7 o'clock, just the time she began to help the children with their lessons—it wouldn't take much of a diagnostician to put that down to eyes.

The go-getter business man who begins to have headaches for the first time in his life at the age of 50—your guess of high blood pressure and kidney change would be right nine times out of ten.

The post-prandial headache in the fat, middle-aged epicure suggests gallbladder disease.

Sinus Headache

Sinus headache is not so much a headache as a faceache—or browache.

Upset of any of the endocrines—thyroid, adrenals, pituitary, gonads—may increase pressure of the blood vessels inside the skull and bring on a headache. Menopause headache is of this character.

Not long ago I had all the chronic headaches in a big clinic sent to me for study. Eighty per cent of them were nerves or migraine.

Ohioans Paid More, Got Less Whiskey During '43

(By Associated Press)

Columbus, Jan. 7.—Ohioans got only about half as much liquor from state stores last year as in 1942 but it cost them more, state liquor department figures showed today.

Liquor Director Don Fisher said dollar sales last year aggregated $74,954,504, only 21.46 per cent below the all-time high of $95,438,878 of 1942. Sales in 1941 were $70,391,962.

The gallonage total, however, was 5,397,402 between Jan. 1, 1943, and last Dec. 31, compared with 10,026,270 gallons for the comparable 1942 period.

A TRIBUTE TO THE

Retail Salespeople
of America

At the beginning of a new year we pay tribute to those loyal citizens who serve behind the retail counters of America.

Shortages, complications of rationing, the fact that many of their number are in the armed services, make their job today more difficult than ever.

Despite all of this the retail selling job has its high rewards!

Good retail salespeople like their work! They like to meet and serve people! They take pride in each sale well made! And they know that on the home front they support the war effort by helping to maintain our high standard of living.

Try to imagine, for a moment, how your family's daily needs—food, clothing and household supplies—could be taken care of if all the retail salespeople were suddenly spirited away!

During 1944 we will do our best to make pleasant and profitable the work of the people who meet and greet you in Penney's stores.

Not only that, but as a genuine community service we shall put into their hands, for you, the maximum of value and quality that war conditions allow.

FOOD STAMP PLAN GETS WFA BACKING

Government would Subsidize Grocery Bills of Low Income Families

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—The War Food Administration today gave surprise endorsement today to legislation that would set up a government stamp plan to subsidize the grocery bills of low income families.
The plan would provide for distribution of food stamps to families of substandard incomes to insure the man adequate, basic diet. The WFA estimated 18,000,000 persons would be eligible and that the program would cost the government a maximum of $3,000,000,000 yearly.
WFA's approval was set forth in a letter to the senate agriculture committee and plans were announced to open hearings on the bill, probably within a week.
Surprise over WFA's sanction of the plan was occasioned by the fact that the bill, introduced last July by Senators Aiken (R-Vt) and LaFollette (Prog-Wis), includes a ban against price control subsidies, key weapon in the administration's fight to stabilize consumer food prices.

Health Benefit Cited
Grover B. Hill, who signed the letter as acting WFA administrator, said the plan was desirable from a standpoint of public health but that the WFA did not believe it would prevent food costs from rising.
"On the other hand," Hill's letter said, "it would at least partly compensate low income families for recent or prospective price increases."
The bureau of the budget advises that, while enactment of section 302 (prohibiting subsidy payments) would not be in accord with the program of the President, it has no objection to the submission of this report.

Possibility the bill might become a basis for a congressional compromise on the hotly debated food subsidy issue was seen by Sen. Aiken, who said he would be willing to modify the anti-subsidy section.
Provisions Outlined
In brief, the plan would:
Establish a "basic food allotment" or minimum standard diet. If a family's income was insufficient to provide such a diet, the family would be eligible for supplemental federal aid with stamps added to the family's normal outlays for food to equal cost of the basic diet. The WFA would administer the program through existing state and local agencies.

The WFA estimated at $646 a year the current cost of the basic diet for an average family of four, and concluded such a family would need an annual income of at least $2,350 to buy that amount of food.

Soldiers Sing At Night, Says Baritone After Pacific Tour

BY JOHN SELBY
AP Arts Editor

NEW YORK — Soldiers won't sing in daylight, Lansing Hatfield says after six months of singing to and with service men in the southwest Pacific.

"At night they can't be kept from singing," he adds, "but self-consciousness or something gets into their vocal cords in daylight."

The young baritone, with pianist Edwin McArthur, was sent to the South Pacific something over six months ago, and the idea was that they would organize soldiers' entertainments and shows and what-not.

"It didn't work," Hatfield declares. "There wasn't time, conditions were bad, men were too scattered. We were a little discouraged when one day General MacArthur sent for us. He said the men needed us, and he intended to see that we got to the men."

Flew Into Wilds
"We did, believe me. We traveled by everything from a plane to a PT boat, into every sort of place the tropics afford. With cigarettes we hired natives to cut banana palms out from under our jeep, we found bugs in our piano, and Eddie McArthur, who had learned to play an accordion to take care of the places without pianos, used to have to separate the bellows, leaf by leaf, before he started. It was that damp and sticky."

The Hatfield-McArthur combination went at their job a little differently. Usually Hatfield sang a group of songs, more or less "important" depending on the temper of the audience. Then the team would start something like "Irish Eyes Are Smiling," and by the time the refrain had arrived, some of the boys would be singing. It went on from there.

Lord's Prayer Favorite
"There was talent all over the place," says Hatfield. "We could hear his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Crist."

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Sanor, newlyweds, were given a miscellaneous shower at Lake Placidia hall Tuesday evening.

usually get the names of some of the boys who did things, and in the second part of our show we'd call them up. Usually they came and loved it. Once we called on a colonel, and he sang well. We had a spoon player, dancers, everything. The boys would call for their favorites, and somehow McArthur and I would do them, we managed somehow.

"One of the things they wanted again and again was 'The Lord's Prayer.' One officer demanded 'Danny Boy.' He said his grandmother used to sing him to sleep with it, and he wanted to know how it ended! And there was the fellow in the hospital. He was dying and he wanted 'Ave Maria.' He got it, but I wouldn't say it was a very steady performance on my part."

Gave Dozen Shows
Hatfield and McArthur often sang as many as a dozen programs a day—hospital shows in the morning, and afternoon and night shows for the troops. Three-quarters of the time they had pianos, often good ones, Hatfield says, although some were full of bugs and small grass snakes.

Odd things happened, too. Once a delegation of Negro troops came up to ask Hatfield not to sing "Ol' Man River." They disapproved. And in Australia, where McArthur conducted three formal symphony concerts with Hatfield as soloist, General MacArthur's little boy broke away from his mother at a rehearsal, reached the stage, and demanded to be shown all the instruments that represented the characters in Prokofiev's "Peter and the Wolf."

Hatfield was to blame for that. He had given the boy the records of "Peter and the Wolf."

WMC Sees Cutbacks

CLEVELAND, Jan. 7 — Only a few thousand of the approximately 300,000 war workers in this area have been laid off because of reductions in the armament program "but by the end of January there will be a lot of cutbacks," Dr. William P. Edmunds, Cleveland area director of the War Manpower commission, declared today.

ST. JACOB'S CHURCH TO HEAR MISSIONARY

Rev. Theophilus F. Hilgeman, a former missionary in China, will be guest speaker at the 11 a. m. service Sunday at St. Jacob's Evangelical and Reformed church, six miles south of Salem on Route 45.

The speaker served as a missionary for the Evangelical and Reformed church in China for 18 years, returning to this country last year. He studied Chinese at the Nanking language school before being appointed to evangelistic work at the Shenchow station in Hunan province.

A native of New Middletown, Ind., he is a graduate of Mission House college and the theological seminary near Plymouth, Wis., and the University of Wisconsin. He took graduate work at the Yale divinity school.

Since his return from China last year, Rev. Hilgeman has given numerous accounts of the church work in Free China and has done considerable deputation work for the board of international missions of the church.

The public is invited to attend the service which will close with the sacrament of holy communion.

Christian Endeavor, meeting at 8 p. m., will be in charge of Clifford Alken, Jr. His program topic will be "Be Still and Know."

to comply with the wishes of Congress.

Classified in 3 Groups

The examining doctors will classify acceptable men in three groups: "Army general service," "Army-limited service" and "Navy" (including Marines and Coast Guard).

Local boards hereafter will receive Army and Navy quotas instead of one general call for men as heretofore. The boards will fill their army quotas from men classified for the Army by the examining doctors, and Navy quotas in the same way.

Generally, only registrants in class 1-A will be ordered to report for pre-induction examinations.

However, any registrant may request his local board to send him for such an examination, and if the local board determines that he is due to be called up shortly, even though he may not be in 1-A, it is authorized to order the examination.

If a registrant wishes immediate induction he may sign a request before taking a pre-induction physical, and if he passes the physical he will be inducted at once instead of waiting 21 or more days.

COLUMBIANA CHURCH SERVICES ARRANGED

COLUMBIANA, Jan. 7.—Rev. Theodore F. Hilgeman, returned missionary from China, will be the guest speaker at 7:30 p. m. at the Grace Reformed church, according to the pastor, Rev. Waldo J. Bartels. The service is open to the public. Holy communion at 10:45 a. m.

Probate Judge Homer Hammond will be guest speaker at the Methodist church Sunday evening service at 7. He will speak on "The Hand of God in the History of America."

Holy communion will be observed at the 10:45 morning service at the Presbyterian church Sunday with the pastor, Rev. J. K. McDill, in charge. In the evening the senior groups will hold a covered supper at the church. "Youth" month is being observed in the church for the month of January and a sermon for the juniors will be presented at each morning service by the pastor.

Past Noble Grand's club of the Rebekah lodge will meet Monday evening at 8.

Mahoning Election Board Clerk Named

YOUNGSTOWN, Jan. 7.—Byron Wade, elected Monday as clerk of the Mahoning county board of elections, resigned today and was immediately named acting clerk of the board.

Wade, a Republican, was chosen Monday to succeed John W. Powers, a Democrat, who resigned to become city law director. Secretary of State Edward J. Hummel ruled that Powers' successor must be a Democrat.

John P. Gorman, Democrat, who was named a deputy clerk to fill the vacancy caused by Powers' resignation, has been a member of the board only a short time while Wade has been there 12 years.

Elections officials felt they wanted an experienced man as clerk. John C. Vitullo, Democrat, who was chosen chairman Monday because Wade, the clerk, was a Republican, resigned this morning and was succeeded by James G. Eardley, Sebring Republican, who stepped out of the chairmanship Monday in favor of Vitullo. Under the law the chairman and clerk must be of opposite political parties.

to become their master." "Let no one be misled to believe," he said, "that the attack on business in this country, the subordination of local government, the suppression of the individual, the growth of bureaucracy are solely a part of the war program. They are essentially a part of the New Deal philosophy."

Asserting the country needed not only a change in political leadership "but a change from the New Deal philosophy of government," Bricker offered the Republican party as the only hope of obtaining those changes.

Cites Republican Policy "The policy of the Republican party is that of promoting business, encouraging the individual, providing jobs in industry through a sound economy, and of releasing private enterprise by reasonable and sane tax legislation. A Republican victory will assure us here at home that no one party or office holder is indispensable," he declared.

"A Republican victory will be the assurance that in freeing the world from tyranny, we shall also free our people of unnecessary governmental domination and that the policy making power of government will be taken from the bureaucrats and placed in the hands of the elected representatives of the people."

Bricker declared the war could not be won "upon the New Deal defeatist philosophy of a mature economy."

"If our armed forces had no more faith in self-government than our political leaders have shown in the last 10 years, we would not today be winning the war," he added.

TANK FORCES SET FOR SECOND FRONT

United States Command Expected to Be Steel Tip Of Allied Drive

WITH U. S. ARMORED FORCE. Somewhere in England—Flexibility is the keystone of armored force command; versatility the hard core of rank and file training. Preparing today to break through the fortress of Europe, this armored force outfit is well practiced in working as a whole or functioning as a combination of combat teams. It expects to be one of the steel tips for the concerted Allied offensive on the continent and it has brought to Britain the experience of many months of hard training all over the tank grounds of the United States.

To Meet Clever Foe In the coming battle its commanding officers realize that they will meet a clever foe, that they may face situations new to tank warfare and that they may be called on to meet unique conditions. When the armored force was organized it was built for flexibility. And this outfit today can go into action as a coordinated striking force under the direction of its commanding officer. But the commanding officer can also delegate to one of his subordinates a number of tanks, a block of infantry and units of field artillery to act as a compact fighting team in a given sector.

This scheme of things has been well learned by the officers at this armored headquarters. Most of them are surprisingly young and they speak eagerly of what they hope to accomplish.

Used As Driving Force Under ideal conditions, they said, their outfit would be used as a driving force to make a deep penetration in enemy lines. The armored column, they explained, would assemble power in depth and pile through rear elements passing through any units that might be held at a standstill. In that way the enemy would be hit again and again until forced to break.

Speed, mobility and terrific firepower all play a part in making this great springing telescope. This pile driver of men and weapons, work.

"If we are used the way we ought to be used under the right conditions, the way we have been trained to be used, we think we can do some good," one officer stated very modestly and cautiously.

Lacking the right conditions, the ideal situation, the outfit is counting on its flexibility, its initiative, and the ability for adaptation that ranks so high in a tank-er's military philosophy.

Every Man Well Drilled Down in the line every man has been drilled for more than one job. In an organization as complex and highly mechanized as this there are a tremendous number of specialists.

The miracle of American technical achievement has been crystallized in the equipment of this self-contained army. Civilians back in the States have been going without radios, washing machines, motor cars, hairpins and brass doorknobs so this stuff could be built.

And meanwhile, three boys—a cross-section of mechanical minded America—have been trained to use all these latest fighting gadgets.

Learn To Work As Unit They have not only learned to work their tanks—complex, hard-hitting babies with guns, radio, airplane engines and all—but they have also mastered a host of other gun-carrying vehicles. They have learned to pick up and lay mines, build and demolish, drive jeeps and trucks, cook in mobile kitchens, operate sensitive communications systems, take apart and put together tommyguns, rifles, howitzers, read maps, lead ammunition, fix complicated and delicate sights.

The specialists are first of all soldiers, then experts. And that's why, when the time comes, they think they can do some good.

U. S. Soldier Trained With Lethal Gases In Surprise "Attacks"

(By United Press) MITCHEL FIELD, N. Y. — Gas mask drills with actual, lethal war gases and frequent surprise "attacks" with less-harmful tear gas are giving officers and enlisted personnel of the Army Air Forces here both the confidence and the ability necessary to deal with one of the most feared of all war weapons.

The chemical warfare educational program at this aerial defense base, which is headquarters for the first air force and first fighter command, bases its training on the realistic premise that the best gas protection in the world is useless unless a man knows when to use it, how to use it correctly and—above all—quickly.

The gas chamber in which each trainee must go through his paces used to be filled with tear gas—irritating but hardly fear-inspiring. Today it is filled with chlorine—one of the deadly vapors developed for actual combat. There's no danger if the soldier uses his mask as he has been taught—he holds his breath for the 20 seconds—and the added confidence, in himself and in his protective mask, may save both panic and casualties if the soldier meets gas in actual combat.

Smells Like Geraniums Alone in a fox-hole, a soldier would be a dead soldier if he didn't recognize a deadly gas when he sniffed it. Identification, too, is taught in a realistic manner through field tests in which dilute concentrations of actual gases are released. Lectures, posters and jingles are also part of the campaign. This jingle—never won its author any poetry prizes, but it's one of the many hard-working and effective devices which keep the training constantly in every soldier's mind.

"Grandman smelled geranium. Started feeling kind of bum. Sure you guessed the trouble right? Grandma whiffed some LEWIS-ITE!"

Personnel is required to carry gas masks at all times, and a group of soldiers in a shop or on a hike is no

'Blessed Event' Able Only to Limp Home After Rabaul Raid

(By Associated Press) TOROKINA AIRFIELD, Bougainville, Jan. 7.—About all the "Blessed Event" had left when she limped away from Rabaul was her name and a grim will to live. During the perilous mission, Staff Sgt. John E. Lemmon, Kent, Ohio, turret gunner, blazed at the Japanese until his guns jammed, then climbed into the waist to continue firing. He was credited with two Zeros for certain. One engine of the big Liberator had conked out, another was virtually useless. Her left rudder had been shot away, the landing gear blasted, the radio and electric systems disrupted and the instrument panel punctured. But Lieut. Harry P. John, Crowley, La., pilot of the 40-ton ship, finally brought her down on the Torokina airfield. Eight of nine crew members were wounded, and the tenth was dead. Together, they had downed four Japanese planes and probably three more in a blazing 40-minute fight in their first mission over the enemy's New Britain stronghold. The Number three engine failed about five minutes away from the target, Lieut. John said, "but we decided to go on in." At least 23 Zeros pounced on the crippled Liberator. One burst demolished the instrument panel. The bomber jettisoned its load and turned for home.

The War Today

By DeWitt MacKenzie

Prussia is racially Polish. So is a slice of Silesia. Those who have been pondering this question have been thinking along the lines of Poland receiving East Prussia, the once free city of Danzig and a slice of eastern Germany as compensation for the territory that Russia is at this moment in process of reoccupying. It might be necessary to transport the German residents of these areas to Germany, to avoid the racial conflicts which have been the curse of eastern Europe for centuries.

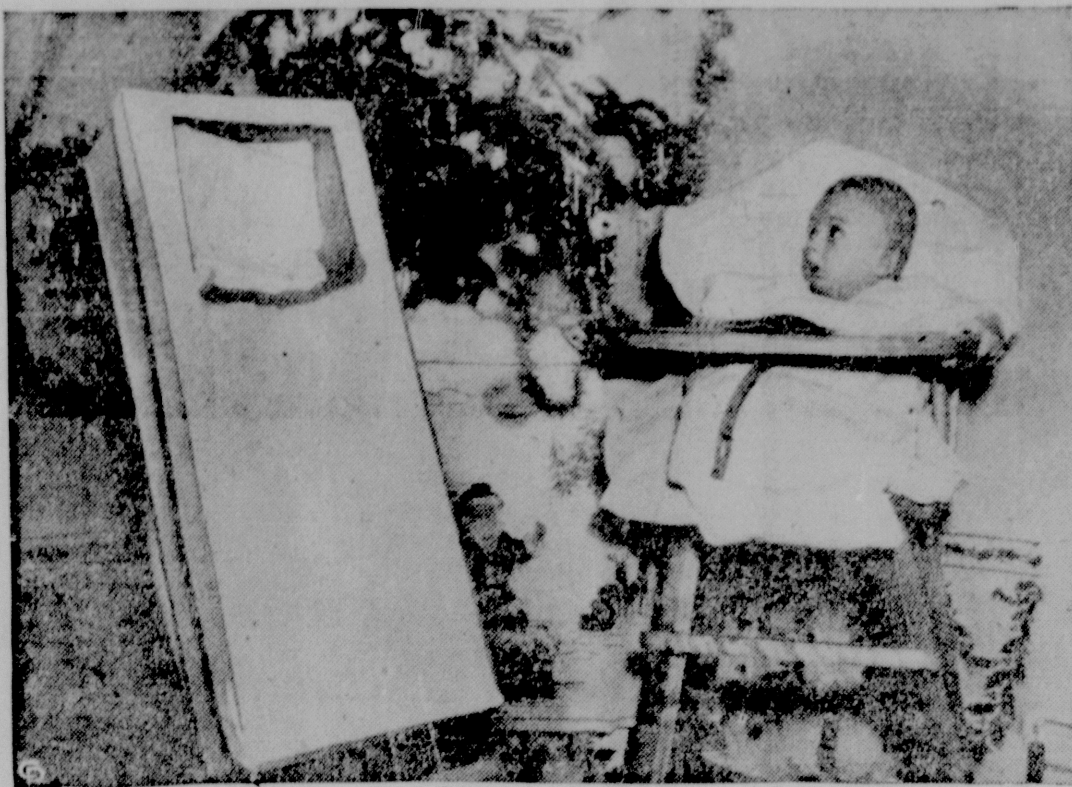

The attitude of the Polish government in exile to "Prefree Poland's" proposal will be awaited with concern. Should the Poles feel able to subscribe to this idea, it might provide a solution for one of the most difficult problems which the Allies have to face. Premier Mikolajczyk, speaking in London last night, sprangly hinted that Poland won't yield easily, if at all, to Russia's claims. He did say, however, that "irrespective of political situation" the Russian offensive brings nearer the moment of our final reckoning with the Germans.

Believed Holdup Victim

CLEVELAND, Jan. 7.—Police theorized today that Lester Leman, 24, former Ohio reformatory inmate whose body was found in an isolated spot, was fatally wounded in a frustrated holdup of a downtown club.

to her Dec. 15: "The Japs are getting pretty scarce out here, and I doubt if I will be able to beat Joe Foss's record before I am sent home."

She recalled a Dec. 26 letter to his step-father, in which he said: "As you have always taught me, there is nothing worth while unless you earn it."

"I have learned that many things have to be used to achieve a good purpose. I have had to send men to their deaths."

"The only consolation I have is that I led my boys into everything they went into."

Greg Boyington led his men, too, on that sweep from which he failed to return, the Guadalcanal report said. More than 50 fighters participated in the flight and shot down six of 25 intercepting Zeros, with five more listed as probables.

Other members of "Boyington's Blacksheep" squadron expressed belief the major destroyed 40 Zeros in all. Only those seen to crash, explode or burn are listed in the confirmed score.

Boyington was born at Coeur D'Alene, Idaho. His father, Dr. C. B. Boyington, is a dentist at St. Maries, Idaho.

Boyington is the father of a 7-year-old boy and two younger girls. His marriage ended in divorce.

Small Business Hearings
Are Opened at Columbus

COLUMBUS, Jan. 7.—The Ohio Small Business commission, beginning a series of hearings throughout the state, heard government-financed, tax-exempt cooperatives held up as a threat to free enterprise and a suggestion that the state of Ohio could set the example to the federal government by getting out of the liquor business.

The latter proposal was made by Charles Justice of Columbus, a former legislator, who insisted that by abolishing the liquor monopoly the state would show its willingness to cooperate in avoiding competition with private business.

DEATHS

MRS. NETTIE PIDGEON

Mrs. Nettie Pidgeon, 78, died at 11 last evening at the Southside nursing home in Alliance following a two year illness.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stanley, she was born Oct. 12, 1866, south of Westville. She was a member of the Westville Christian church.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Arthur Johnson of Alliance; one son, J. A. Pidgeon of Salem; five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Funeral service will be held at 2 p. m. Monday at the Stark memorial here in charge of Rev. A. J. Fryhoff, pastor of the Friends church in Alliance. Burial will be in Quaker Hill cemetery.

Friends may call Saturday afternoon and evening at the Johnson home, 895 S. Haines st., Alliance, and Sunday afternoon and evening at the Stark memorial.

GEORGE G. MCCARTNEY

George G. McCartney, 75, former Lisbon resident who for the past few years had made his home with his son, Ray McCartney of the Damascus road, died in the Salem City hospital Thursday following several weeks' illness.

A retired farmer, he was born in Lisbon Sept. 20, 1868, a son of Thomas and Rebecca Bough McCartney, and most of his life had been spent near Lisbon. He was a member of the Presbyterian church.

Surviving are four sons, Grant McCartney of Wickliffe, Earl McCartney of Mayfield Heights, Ray McCartney and Ray McCartney of Salem; two brothers, William McCartney of East Liverpool, and Homer McCartney of Salem.

The body was removed to the Henry funeral home at Lisbon where services will be held at 3:30 p. m. Saturday in charge of Rev. J. Morgan Cox. Burial will be in the Lisbon cemetery.

Friends may call at the Lisbon funeral home this evening.

Speeding Great Sin

Speeding charges led the list of arrests in 1943, the patrol chief reported, with drunken driving next in number. Other arrests were misdemeanors including insufficient lights, reckless operation, driving without proper license, driving with improper or fictitious plates.

Aside from their regular duties, state highway patrolmen were active in the instruction of auxiliary patrolmen and cooperated in the work of several blackout tests here and throughout the patrol area.

Egg Shortage Foreseen
Although Plentiful Now

(By Associated Press)

Despite a surplus of eggs now flooding markets from coast to coast poultry leaders today envisioned an acute egg famine in many parts of the country before the year ends if prices continue to decline while feed and labor costs rise.

Poultrymen reported many eastern and middle western farmers were selling their flocks because under- selling prices did not cover pro- duction costs and fear was ex- pressed so many would be disposed of there might be an egg shortage within a few months.

Peat is the principal fuel used in Hammerfest, Norway, Europe's most northerly city.

Ohio Coal Miners
Chalk Up Safety
Record During '43

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, Jan. 7.—The men who dig Ohio's coal hung up their best safety record last year.

Marcus Kerr, chief of the State Division of Mines, reported today only 53 of Ohio's 30,000 miners were killed in accidents during 1943, compared with 70 of the previous year, or about one fatality for each 600,000 tons of coal produced.

The rate of deaths per tons of coal mined was "about 100,000 tons better than any year" in Ohio, Kerr asserted.

He added that the record was attained despite the greatest wartime mine labor turnover ever experienced in the state, a factor he said accounted for numerous mining accidents.

Kerr estimated 1943 coal production for Ohio at 30 million tons, compared with 31 in 1942, and attributed the drop to work stoppages resulting from contract disputes and the high rate of worker turnover.

Only three deaths were attributed to mine explosions in 1943. They occurred at Belle Valley pit in Noble county last January. Most other fatalities resulted from rock falls and traffic mishaps inside shafts, Kerr added.

Three Deaths Reported

CLEVELAND, Jan. 7.—Dr. Theodore G. Duncan, chief of the city's bureau of communicable diseases, reported three deaths had resulted from the eight meningitis cases reported in the first five days of 1944.

Revival Of Old Ohio State Baseball League Hits Snag

TROUBLE AT START APPEARS AS FOUR CITIES IGNORE BID

Joe Donnelly, Former State Baseball Prexy, In Role Of Organizer

BY FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS, Jan. 7.—It appears that Joe Donnelly, chunky ex-prexy of the defunct Ohio State Baseball league, may run into some difficulty Sunday as he attempts not only to revive that Class D loop but to hoist it to an eight-class circuit.

Four of nine cities invited to Sunday's organization meeting indicated today they would not be represented, and two others were unheard from, one uninvited guest was fighting for a franchise.

Hamilton, Lancaster, Mansfield and Marion made up the quartet of "not interested" cities; Lima, Springfield and Middletown were all set to send from two to five delegates; Newark and Zanesville were unheard from, but Fremont—not asked to attend—definitely was bidding for a berth. Marlan (Doc) White, vice president of the Fremont club, charter member of the old Ohio State league, said the laws of baseball protected franchise holders and that the Fremont club had too much money invested in park lights to be "frozen out." He did not say whether he would attend Sunday's session.

Reversal of Procedure

Donnelly, "reversing his field" by attempting to organize a league while other circuits are folding, said at least a dozen major league clubs were interested in the proposed circuit and that members would receive players from the big time.

In 1941—the year the old Ohio State league disbanded—the minors hit their peak with 41 leagues in operation. The war shattered that, the list dropping to 24 in 1942, and to nine in 1943. Last season three AA loops operated, along with one A-1 circuit, one class A, two class B and two class D—the latter being the Pony and Appalachian.

"If we are going to have a post-war baseball program," Donnelly said, "We must start building toward it now. Class D leagues are known as schools for ball players, and Ohio is an ideal spot for such a circuit."

"With much of the talent in the army, the big league scouts are on the move all the time trying to find kids who can make the grade. All the big league clubs, on their playing trips, cross and recross Ohio all season, and the big league managers would have a chance to look over our kids."

I've talked with a score or more scouts, and everyone of them told me he had three or four promising recruits, but had no place to send 'em for seasoning. A league made up of the towns mentioned would have everything. Travel expenses would be low, because the league would be compact. The towns are close enough to instill natural rivalry. Defense plants are booming and the 'gate' should be good for there's plenty of money floating around."

Among the big leaguers Donnelly said would attend Sunday's confab were George Torporcher, head of the Boston Red Sox farms, Frank Riskey and Marty Purtell of the New York Giants; Jack McAllister of the Boston Braves, and Eddie Gilliland of Toledo, head of the Toledo club of the American association and representative of the St. Louis Browns in this area.

Donnelly said the $1500 per month salary limit proposed for each 15-man club probably wouldn't attract many youngsters from higher-paying jobs in industry, but he indicated the payment of a bonus for signing a contract, permitted under baseball rules, could "take up some of the slack."

A. A. U. SPORTSMAN - - By Jack Sords

Formation of Grand Scale Pacific Pro Football Club Seen

PORTLAND, Ore.—With the death of intercollegiate football in the Pacific northwest this season and the near-death in California, coast sports writers and club cliques are edging toward a campaign to inaugurate professional football on a grand scale in the west.

For years formation of a full-fledged Pacific circuit has provided good between-season gab, arguments from lovers of the college game and a few weak attempts. Last year a four-club circuit actually went into operation—but only in the northwest, and it was not any whooping success. Promoters began that league composed of Portland, Seattle, Spokane and Vancouver, Wash., with a set of blueprint plans drawn with wash-away chalk.

College conferences have money-stacked alumni behind them. A professional conference is no different. It, too, must have backing, must be organized thoroughly, must be able to stand up under a few setbacks.

Several months back a coast loop actually went into action—almost. A 12-team circuit was mapped out—four in Southern California, four in the San Francisco bay area and four in the Northwest.

Democrat Principles of Indian

Navy Ignore Caste, Color, Creed

(By United Press)
SEATTLE — Indians are seeing democratic principles in action in the operation of their naval service.
Lt. Comdr. Hajee Mohammed
Siddiq Choudri of the Royal Indian Navy reported during a visit here.

Members of the Indian navy are recruited and serve together irrespective of class, creed or color,
completely ignoring the century-old caste system of India, according to Choudri, who is making a series of speaking engagements in this country under sponsorship of the U. S. Navy.

Except for a few minor exceptions, the Indian navy makes no concessions to religious differences of the men, he said.

"Aside from the Sikhs, who wear their turbans, all the Indian navy men dress according to regulation — similar to the English," he declared. "We let the Sikhs wear their turbans, chiefly because the navy has not yet designed a cap which will encompass their hair."

The Indian navy has grown from seven ships in 1939 to "several hundred" at the present time, most of them small vessels for convoy, anti-submarine, minesweep patrol and harbor defense work, he reported.

Regarding reports of dissension among Indians over relations with Japan, Choudri said "no sane Indian wants the Japanese to take his country."

"But then, in India we do not want any foreigners," he declared.

Navy Ignore Caste, Color, Creed

SEATTLE — Indians are seeing democratic principles in action in the operation of their naval service.
Lt. Comdr. Hajee Mohammed
Siddiq Choudri of the Royal In-

Members of the Indian navy are

spective of class, creed or color,
completely ignoring the century-
old caste system of India, according to Choudri, who is making a series of speaking engagements in this country under sponsorship of
the U. S. Navy.

Except for a few minor excep-

"THAT KEITH WOMAN"

by PHYLLIS MOORE GALLAGHER

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Peter paused again; then said, "The last provision was that if Sandra died before Pamela, and before Sandra was twenty-one, the estate was to be divided among Richard Keith's next of kin. That meant my mother and me."

I took a long breath. Peter then went into other ramifications of the Keith mystery especially from its money angles.

"So you see, Letty, there are a lot of motives piled up. Especially when you know that Gladys Newcomb lost her fortune in the crash and has been living on a small income (and mostly from) ever since. She's up to her ears in debt. Also, Marvin Eustace's estate is mortgaged to the hilt. He and Elsie have rented it to a rich congressman; besides that, Marvin has plenty of other financial headaches. He could use that trusteeship, all right."

"And now the Countess. Pamela's room-rent at The Carlton-Arms is five months in arrears, she's been asked to move, and has kept stalling them along with the fiction that soon she'd be sitting pretty financially. That biography of hers wasn't a best-seller anywhere but here in Washington where she and the people she wrote about are known. Actually, she made about $4,000 out of it, that's all—and that was five years ago!"

"And now the Wayne Courtney angle: His house in London was bombed to the ground. He's never had a whole lot of money and what he did have in England is being taxed to the limit. Suppose he had found out in some way that Sandra is really his daughter. With Pamela dead, and Sandra becoming twenty-one, he'd have control of all that money himself, a daughter who'd be generous to him, and who wouldn't dare interfere because, actually, the money isn't legally hers. At the death of the real Sandra Keith, that money was—"

"Yours and your mother's!" I interrupted. "Legitimately yours and your mother's!"

"Yes, at that time," Peter admitted, and his face changed utterly. "You see, Letty, my mother died two months ago while I was in South America."

I murmured, "Oh-h, Peter!" and my fingers tightened a little on my arm. Presently I said, "So that explains why you came to Washington? To start suit for your rightful inheritance?"

"No, not exactly," Peter said. "I crashed that debut reception because I had never met Pamela Keith. I also wanted to see Wayne Courtney's daughter. A lot depended on what I saw, whether I would file my claim or not. I'm still trying to make up my mind. You see, Sandra Keith would suffer if I sue—probable loss of her inheritance, scandal about the past.... That bears thinking about, you see. I don't have a talent for wrecking people's lives." He was silent for a long moment. "Anyway, I think that Keith's will is behind the murder, don't you?"

"I—I don't know," I replied. "I'm so confused. I—I just don't know." Then I told Peter all I did know about the case, every clue I could remember, and asked him what pattern, if any, did he make of it.

"Look," said Peter, "let's go to your apartment, make out a chart with our information pooled, and see where we stand."

And that, at two o'clock in the morning, is what Peter Gibson and I were doing. Out in the kitchen. Coffee and sandwiches before us, paper and fountain pens and rulers. And while we sat there, working on the chart, trying to figure out who murdered Pamela Keith—the murderer struck again.

Peter and I finished the chart just as dawn hung like an opaline mist over the city. We were both exhausted. Looking across the kitchen table, our eyes met and admitted certain things; that we didn't know who had murdered Pamela Keith or Marcella Kingsley, that we weren't even sure the latter had been murdered; that we had settled on two suspects without a shred of real evidence and with a theory that was full of holes.

"I guess this is a job for the police," after all," I yawned.

"Yes," said Peter, running his fingers through his tousled hair. "I guess it is, all right. Our detective efforts are only getting us into trouble."

We were looking bleakly into each other's eyes. Then Peter grinned and said, reaching for my hands: "Come over here, childhood, where you belong."

I did.... Beside us the long, involved chart lay forgotten on the kitchen table.

Peter and I started fixing breakfast at seven A. M. I tied an apron around my middle, pointed out the coffee tin, the percolator, the toaster, and told him where he'd find bread....

When we finished setting the table in the dining room, I awakened my parents and soon we were all breakfasting.

Dad gloomed about the Far Eastern situation, then mother amused us with tales she'd picked up at Kate Lote's reception. She had finished telling us about Marvin Eustace being at a political clam-bake down on the Potomac and winning a fifty yard dash, when Peter asked for another piece of toast and I skipped out to the kitchen. I was fitting a slice of bread into the toaster when I happened to glance out of the window. Startled by what I saw, the slice of bread fell to the floor.

A second later, Mother, Dad and Peter were in the kitchen with me. Peter ejaculated, "What's the matter, Letty? What's happened?"

"Lo-o-o-ok," I stammered, and got up enough strength to point my finger at the rock garden on the hotel grounds. "T-t-t-her's another r-r-rock gone from the g-g-garden. C-c-could it mean....? But it c-c-couldn't! S-s-sergeant H-Hornblower was going to have the g-g-garden w-w-watched!"

The words hardly passed my lips when a thunderous knocking on the door sent goosepimples up and down my spine.

Dad jumped a good two feet; Peter and Mother caught their breaths. No one made the slightest move toward the door. The thumping came again, I swallowed hard—and started toward it. A limber-kneed-Leon-Errol sort of walk, to be sure. When I opened the door I found the Law in the person of Heath, the note-taker, standing in the hotel corridor.

"Sergeant Hornblower," said Heath, "would like to see you immediately at the Keith house, Miss Randolph."

Over my shoulder, the policeman saw Peter materialize through the foyer door. Dad also came into view with Mother his shadow.

"Sergeant Hornblower wants to see you, too, Mr. Gibson," Heath announced.

This probably meant that the police were going to spring something on us. Open a closet door at the Keith house, maybe, and let a body roll out right in front of our eyes to see what reaction we'd have!

Peter and I followed the big policeman. We crossed the hotel grounds, skirted the tennis courts and swimming pool, and came to that spot where Pamela Keith had met her death. For the space of perhaps five slow, painful heartbeats, my brain reconstructed that grim scene of exactly one week ago. Peter's mind had been following my own, and he caught my arm in his hand and shook it gently.

"Cut it out!" he murmured. Then his arm went around my shoulder and I could feel it.... compelling and comforting.... through the soft fur of my coat. Finally we reached the solarium door and the drawing room where Sergeant Roger Hornblower had gathered together everyone connected with the case.

My eyes swept the long room to see who was missing from our group of suspects, for I felt certain now that there had been.... a third victim.

Sandra, in a dark blue silk jersey, was standing by the mantel, tearing a white-lace handkerchief into shreds. Young Victor Corliss was beside her, his hands behind his back, and I wondered if they.... the hands.... were there to hide their trembling.

Charlotte Cunningham, lovely as ever in her lavender uniform, was at a respectful distance from all the others.

Luke Cramer, a symphony in brown, was seated in a gold-brocaded chair, his head in his hands. Gladys Newcomb in a red sweater and skirt was sitting on the pebble-point love seat, Wayne Courtney on one side of her and Earle Pines on the other. The forced composure of Pines was apparent.

Marvin and Elsie Eustace were ensconced on the gold-brocaded sofa, and Countess Pamela Castigena, in a chair beside a Renaissance table, was snacking chocolates from a silver casket.

Peter Gibson and I both started for the south wall with its hollowed out partition, but Heath directed us to a sofa in the front windows. I wondered if Sergeant Hornblower had learned about that wall with its thin partition. A moment later, seeing Heath take a stand by the Sheraton chair, I decided Hornblower did know and wasn't taking any chance on someone eavesdropping.

G. O. P. to Meet In Chicago Next Week

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7.—A test of strength between prospective presidential candidates appeared developing today on two issues the Republican National committee is expected to settle at its Chicago meeting next week—the site of the party's nominating convention and control of its important, arrangements committee.

New York City's entry into the bidding gave elements of the party favorable to Wendell L. Willkie, a talking point to force the convention away from Chicago, where so-called isolation sentiment has been strong in the past.

There were indications too controversy may arise over complexion of the arrangements committee, which traditionally picks the convention's keynote speaker.

Sen. Taft (R-Ohio), who is supporting Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio for the presidential nomination, said he had heard reports an effort might be made by persons outside the Bricker camp to force selection of the arrangements committee by a vote of the national committee.

This would upset custom, under which Chairman Harrison E. Spangler ordinarily would be directed to name the group.

The committee's nomination of a keynoter usually is accepted without question by the convention.)

Fall Injuries Fatal

CLEVELAND, Jan. 7.—Knocked into a dumbwaiter shaft by a power-driven lift, Mrs. Ethel Lasher, 50, a restaurant employee, was injured fatally.

End Massillon Strike

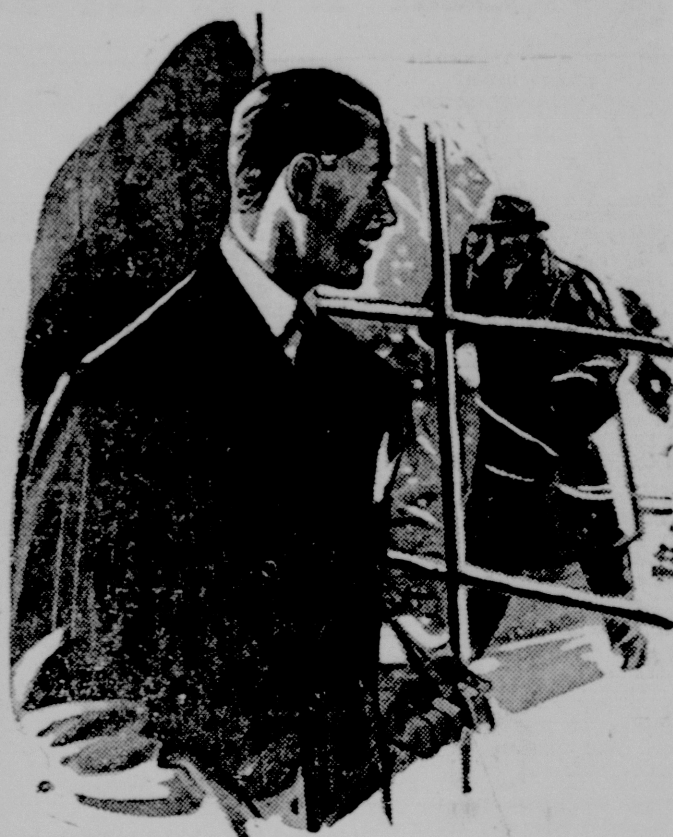

MASSILLON, Jan. 7.—Day shift employees at Republic Steel Corp.'s Enduro division returned to their jobs Thursday, ending a 5-day work stoppage of 300 CIO United Steelworkers. The employees voted to end the shutdown last night, following a War Labor board back-to-work order.

Widow Gets $12,500

TIFFIN, Jan. 7.—A $12,500 settlement was made in Seneca county common pleas court to Mrs. Elizabeth Sours, widow of Homer E. Sours, Pennsylvania railroad brakeman who was crushed to death between freight cars in Sandusky last Sept. 25.
